WANTS CHILDREN TO KNOW MEANING OF WORD FREEDOM

Czechoslovak Dentist, Now In Refugee Camp, Seeks Better Life

LISTENED TO "VOICE"

Programs From U. S., Britain, Meant Much To Family In Prague

This is the story of the flight of a simple Czechoslovak dentist and his family from their native Prague to the American sector of Vienna in search of a more prosperous and freer life. Like several million other refugees who have fled since the war's end from Soviet-occupied and Communist-controlled areas of Eastern Europe, Moritz Richter and his family dared arrest and death to cross the Czechoslovak border into Austria.

Now in a transient camp for refugees in the Austrian capital, Richter hopes to bring his family to the United States, Canada or Israel in search of the economic plenty and the spiritual freedom which he found lacking in his Communist-run native land.

By Irving R. Levine
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

VIENNA, Feb. 1.—(INS)—More than anything else, Moritz Richter explained, he wants his children to know the meaning of freedom.

In search of this freedom, Richter, a 46-year-old dentist, fled this week from Communist Prague to Vienna with nothing but the clothing he, his wife, and their two small children were wearing.

Back in Prague they had had no choice but to leave behind in their one room their worldly possessions—furniture, clothing, family photos and keep-sakes and a little radio.

This radio—a gift of a friend who migrated to Israel when this still was legally possible—provided the Richters with their only uncensored news.

Almost every night when the children were asleep Richter would make sure that the door of their room was locked and then would tune the little radio to the Voice of America and the British Broadcasting Company.

Richter's wife, Bella, always objected to this practice because she feared that they would be overheard and reported to the dreaded political police. There is no Czech law against listening to foreign broadcasts, but it is regarded as an incriminating sign of lack of sympathy for the Communist regime.

Despite her objections, Mrs. Richter usually crowded next to her husband at the radio.

Richter's native language is Czech but he also speaks Hungarian and German. This linguistic ability allowed him to listen to a variety of foreign broadcasts.

At 9 p. m. they heard the Hungarian language broadcast from London, followed at 9:30 by the same station's newscast in Czech. No sooner was this broadcast finished than Richter spun the dial to bear the Voice of America's Czech and Hungarian newscasts.

On Friday nights, like thousands of other western-oriented Czechoslovakians, Richter listened to Bruce Lockhart, Britain's popular former envoy to Prague, whose interest in and affection for Czechoslovakia had endeared him to the people of that land.

PEAK FOR PISTONS!

By present day standards Paul Mantz converted F-51 fighter fighter plane could be considered obsolete. Nevertheless plane and pilot have established a new trans-continental record for piston-engined planes. The flight time of seven minutes less than five hours made aviation news.

Mantz, a stunt flier, has been the only one so far to deprecate the significance of his own efforts. He feels that his 500-odd-mile per-hour average speed represents just about peak performance for gasoline-powered piston engines.

His unsuccessful effort to break his own record in an East-to-West flight which ended in failure in Texas would seem to bear him out. But limits on plane speeds and performance have a way of falling under the pressure of continuing air research and development programs.

There is no doubt that what is currently being witnessed in aviation is emergence of a new generation of planes. Air research has turned away from piston engines because jet and rocket propulsion units have proved their efficiency in catapulting experimental planes through the sonic barrier.

In a way, then, Paul Mantz' record-breaking flight may well be the swan song of a familiar piece of aviation equipment. Remarkable as the achievement was, it suffers by comparison with the out-of-this-world performance of such planes as the supersonic Bell X-1 and others.

NOBODY EATS 'EM

The question, "Who first ate eggs?" has never been answered, if the government knew, perhaps it could unload part of the mountain of eggs it has amassed. At the risk of perpetrating a bad pun, it can be said the egg situation is badly scrambled.

Members of Congress are becoming concerned over the future of the government's price-support program, under which it has already bought 72,000,000 pounds of dried eggs, for which there is no foreseeable market. Three dozen eggs are required to make a pound of dried hen fruit, which adds up to more than 2,500,000,000 eggs.

Farmers aren't happy over the present situation because they contend they are not getting a profitable price for eggs despite the government buying program.

Now are consumers entirely pleased. They insist they are compelled to pay too much for eggs in comparison with the price received by farmers.

Wholesale price of eggs has dropped 30 per cent in New York since the high of last October. Price of chickens also has slipped. In two weeks quotations for broilers went down 30 per cent at the farm, 18 per cent wholesale and five per cent at the retail level, according to figures offered at the Senate hearing.

If anyone can come up with a good idea of what to do with 72,000,000 pounds of dried eggs, the government would like to hear from him.

Wants Children To Know Meaning of Word Freedom

Richter learned of from the Voice of America weeks before they were announced by the Prague press and radio. Many other news items were never carried by the Communist-controlled Czechoslovak news organs.

The news of the arrest, trial and execution of Czechoslovakia's anti-Communist war hero General Pika was heard by Richter on the "Voice" while it was only rumored in Prague.

When liberated by the Americans at Pilsen she traveled to Bucharest to live with relatives. He found her there. Because their home town of Potkarpacka Russ had become Russian territory, they decided to remain in Romania.

When the Romanian Communists gained absolute power, Richter found the political climate oppressive. He and his wife and their first child moved to Prague in August, 1947. Six months later the Communists grabbed power in Prague, Richter knew he could not remain for long.

Now safe in an American sector refugee transient camp in Soviet-ruled Vienna, Richter — penniless and ill — remains optimistic.

"I'm sure there must be a better life somewhere for my children," he said.

On Friday morning the monthly meeting of the Archconfraternity of the Divine Child was held. This is a society which has for its purpose keeping Christ in the schools, from so many of which He has unfortunately been excluded.

Brother F. Michael, the speaker of the occasion, compared life to an athletic contest of which each is the umpire deciding whether our good or our bad side is going to win.

Richter was never sure who was the agent in their house. In many instances, the agent was the porter, who occupied a strategic ground floor apartment from which he could watch the comings and goings of all residents.

On Sundays the Richters frequently went to the Jewish synagogue although they seldom attended Friday evening or Saturday services. They noticed that attendance gradually decreased at the Sunday services following "the events of February, 1948," and were told that this was also true at Sabbath services.

The reason was simple, Richter. Although not actively interfering with the practice of religion, the Communist regime scheduled workers' rallies, Communist indoctrination seminars and compulsory Russian language classes for the hours when church and synagogue services were regularly held.

Similarly, where there were once many Jewish "kosher" meat markets in Prague and elsewhere in Czechoslovakia, according to Richter's information there is now only one such market remaining in Prague. The others have been closed by subtle pressures, he explained.

Richter, hollow-cheeked and thin from undernourishment, explained in emphatic German that he wants his children to know none of these restrictions on freedom of thought, speech, or religion.

The preceding 12 years of his life had been characterized by repeated persecutions.

After receiving his dental degree in 1935 Richter settled in Eastern Slovakia in the town of Potkarpacka Russ and soon developed a profitable practice. He married Bella. They were happy and prosperous. In 1938 when the Nazi legions marched into Czechoslovakia, this section of the country was handed over to the Hungarians by Hitler.

Richter was immediately forbidden to practice his profession. He was drafted into a labor brigade and was rushed to the eastern

Today's Quiet Moment

By the Rev. Stanley Powell
Rector, Eddington P. E. Church
Vicar, Edgely P. E. Chapel

"Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."

In stately Elizabethan English we read time and again the scriptural way of saying: Live one day at a time. Be not anxious for tomorrow.

It never helps to say: "Don't worry." But each person can start today to do something positive. Live one day at a time. First step: relax. Sit down in a comfortable chair. Let your muscles relax. Next step: Remember Jesus. Remember that He came to show God's great love for us. Remember that His very presence affirmed that God first loved us. Then pray:

"O God of peace, who hast taught us that in returning and rest we shall be saved, in quietness and confidence shall be our strength; By the might of thy Spirit lift us, we pray thee, to thy presence, where we may be still and know that thou art God; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen." (Book of Common Prayer.)

Then just sit quietly for a time. You may be slumping in the chair but you will be kneeling in your heart. And you will have made a good start toward living one day at a time.

WARRIORS RALLY TO DEFEAT GEORGE SCHOOL BY 3 POINTS

The George School quintet furnished plenty of opposition for Bristol High last night, but a spirited rally in the final session gave the Warriors the victory, with the final count being: Bristol, 41; George School, 41.

The Warriors trailed for the first half of the tilt and did not deadlock the score until Frank Rich made an under-the-basket hook shot to knot the count at 21-21 about midway of the third period.

From there on, Bristol was the master. George School tied the score on five occasions but never could wrest the lead. The count was tied at 23, 25, 28, 30 and 32. In fact, at the end of the third session, the score was tied at 32-32, with Dave Edwards dropping in a pair of gift shots after the horn had sounded to end the quarter.

The triumph was the eighth of the season for Bristol, against four defeats. The Warriors meet Bensalem in a Lower Bucks County League tilt Friday night.

ROHM & HAAS CAN THROW LEAGUE INTO A SCRAMBLE

Rohm & Haas can throw the Bristol Basketball League standing into a wild scramble tonight if it succeeds in beating the Hibernians in the first game of a double-bill scheduled for the Rohm & Haas floor.

In the second contest, Fifth Ward will meet the Profy quintet. This tilt will get under way at nine o'clock with the first game starting at 7:30 o'clock.

Rohm & Haas has two triumphs to its credit while the Hibs have a three and four average. A victory for the chemical mixers will mean a three way deadlock for third place with the trio of teams being one game away from the second-place Franklin team.

Should Fifth Ward score an upset and topple Profy, it will also move into a deadlock for third position, making the last four teams tied for third notch.

Manager Peter Harkins recently signed "Bill" Burr and Roland Witten to his roster and this pair is expected to strengthen the Hibernians considerably.

The latest addition to the Rohm & Haas team has been Fred Barbetta who managed and played with St. Ann's last season.

If we were annexed to the borough, our taxes would be raised to equal, if not increased over, the existing rates paid in the borough for what you put in."

Mr. States said: "We owe a great debt to Maurice Tomlinson for the work he has done to make this dinner a success, and a vote of thanks to both Robert Roeger and Maurice Tomlinson for the wonderful trophies presented here tonight."

The following cheer-leaders and members of the football team were present: Medite Hamilton, Dolores Tilley, C. has sewers, electric lights, and a police force.

If we were annexed to the borough, our taxes would be charged to the borough for the same number of lights.

(3) We have at present one police officer in the township, and any enlargement of the force could be as well taken care of by the township as through the borough.

The cost would be the same.

(4) The same allowances from the State gasoline tax are made to all third class cities, boroughs, and first class townships—the current rate for 1948 was $35 per mile of hard surfaced roads. Only $10 per mile was allotted to second class townships in 1949. If we convert over to a first class township, we would receive over three times as much as we are now receiving, and based on the 1949 mileage return of $5000, we would receive over $15,000 which could be utilized to reduce our taxes.

"As a first class township we would receive as much as Bristol borough could collect on our roads if we were annexed to the borough.

HERE'S THE NEW 1950 BUICK SUPER 126, companion body-type to the equally new ROADMASTER 130. Both are shorter than last year's 4-door Sedans—but 4 inches longer in wheelbase. In both, the difference is used to give you real stretch-out room in the rear seat!

What the boys did here really calls for some medals.

We gave them the job of coming up with something that was bigger inside—for room and comfort—longer in wheelbase—always important to good riding qualities—yet unbulky and easy-handling in over-all dimensions.

Just look how well this tidy number meets these "impossible" specifications!

Item one—rear-seat cushions are a full foot wider than last year's SUPERS and ROADMasters.

Item two—in every dimension—leg-room, head-room, shoulder-room—this rear-seat compartment is bigger than previous models—and nearly four inches longer, fore and aft, than other 1950 Buick interiors.

Item three—wheelbases are the longest of our 1950 line. On the SUPER, it is 125 1/2" instead of 121 1/2"—on the ROADMASTER 130 1/4" instead of 126 1/4".

Yet—and here's where the magic comes in—the whole car is shorter over-all. Actually less from bumper to bumper than previous Buicks in these series.

That means easier parking, easier tucking away in family garages, easier maneuvering in crowded traffic.

There are some other things too. An extra rear-quarter window not found in standard 4-door Sedans. A different upperstructure styling that makes this body-type stand out as something pretty special.

Even special names that let you say, "I drive a SUPER 126" or "Mine's a ROADMASTER 130," just by way of being different.

Yes, we think we hit on a happy idea in the "Longfellow," as they're coming to be known. They are not longer, on the outside, but there's a two-way stretch—in width and length—in the rear compartment.

You're going to like that—as you'll see by calling on your own Buick dealer. If he doesn't have one on hand, he can get it pretty promptly—and at a price and on a deal you'll have trouble matching, much less beating, anywhere else.

See him now, will you—about placing an order?
